First Call: BC Child and Youth Advocacy Coalition Resolution in Support of Jordan's Principle

Background on Jordan's Principle

The "jurisdictional debate" between the federal and provincial/territorial governments relates to a long-standing disagreement over which government has the ultimate legislative, constitutional, fiscal, and moral responsibility for the provision of services to First Nations children. This debate has resulted in First Nations children falling through the "cracks" and being denied services entirely based on their race and place of residence.

In 2005, a child-centered alternate dispute mechanism/principle was proposed entitled Jordan's Principle<sup>i</sup>. This Principle ensures that First Nations children are no longer denied services that they are entitled to. Under this Principle the government or ministry/department of first contact must pay for the services without delay or disruption. The paying government can then refer the matter to a jurisdictional dispute mechanism.

The Principle is named in honour of a young Manitoba boy who died in hospital while the Federal and Provincial governments argued over who would pay for his specialized care (close to his home community). Sadly, at the age of 5, Jordan passed away – he never got to go home.

Further information on Jordan's story and the national advocacy campaign in support of Jordan's Principle can be found on the First Nations Child and Family Caring Society of Canada website: www.fncfcs.com/home.html and the Many Hands, One Dream

Government and Community Support

On December 12, 2007, the House of Commons voted unanimously in support of BC Member of Parliament Jean Crowder's private member's bill to adopt Jordan's Principle. The bill stated, "That, in the opinion of the House, the government should immediately adopt a child first principle, based on Jordan's Principle, to resolve jurisdictional disputes involving the care of First Nations children."

The Hon. Ted Hughes in his B.C. Children and Youth Review recommended that the Federal and Provincial governments address the jurisdictional issues<sup>ii</sup>. BC's Representative for Children and Youth recently echoed this recommendation and called upon the provincial government to implement Jordan's Principle<sup>iii</sup>.

In January 2008, Premier Gordon Campbell stated publicly that his government fully supports the principle and will work with the federal government and First Nations to make sure children will get the first call and be put at the centre<sup>iv</sup>. The February 2008 Throne Speech stated that the principle will be put into action and that no Aboriginal child should be put at risk due to jurisdictional disputes.

To date, over 1500 organizations have signed a petition in support of Jordan's Principle. http://www.fncfcs.com/more/jordansPrinciple.php

First Call Resolution of Support

As a coalition of provincial and regional organizations and mobilized communities across British Columbia, First Call's partners endorse the 4 Keys to Success for Children and Youth:

- A strong commitment to early childhood development;
- Support in transitions from childhood to youth to adulthood;
- Increased economic equality;
- Safe and caring communities.

First Call's partner organizations feel strongly that Jordan's Principle, a child-first principle for resolving jurisdictional disputes involving the care of First Nations children, positively contributes to our commitment to safe and caring communities. Therefore, be it resolved that:

As a Coalition, First Call supports the full implementation of Jordan's Principle through legislation. We call on the government of British Columbia to follow through on its commitment to supporting Jordan's Principle by:

- Bringing a bill to the provincial legislature for a vote that confirms British Columbia's commitment to implementing a child first principle, based on Jordan's Principle, to resolve jurisdictional disputes involving the care of First Nations children without disrupting services to or negatively impacting the quality of life of First Nations children;
- Including in the proposed bill a commitment to immediate implementation of the principle when the dispute is between provincial ministries;
- Including in the proposed bill a timeline for concluding negotiations with the federal government on the implementation of the principle in the case of federal-provincial disputes;
- Working on an ongoing basis to ensure adequate support and care for First Nations children across ministries and jurisdictions.

First Call resolves to continue advocating for the full implementation of Jordan's Principle until satisfied that the needs of First Nations children in BC will no longer be compromised by jurisdictional disputes. First Call recognizes the complexities of implementing Jordan's Principle and looks forward to supporting and contributing to the process of successful implementation at the provincial level.

Procedure for making decisions on First Call Policy (2001)

The participants in the monthly Coalition Meetings of First Call make decisions using the following consensus model. Full discussion is afforded, usually over several weeks.

- ♦ That policy and priority decisions in First Call are made by the participants in the monthly Coalition Meetings.
- ♦ All major items will be announced in advance. Those who are not able to attend the meeting may send their comments in writing at least one day before the meeting. These will be read at the meeting.
- First Call will strive for consensus where possible. When there is strong division, the item will be deferred to another meeting to reflect, get more information, have committee work done, etc.
- ♦ Where consensus cannot be reached and a decision must be made, a minimum 85% majority of those in attendance is required for a decision to carry.
